Denipro

Innovative system supplier with extensive expertise in developing solutions

Atlanta/Weinfelden, April 4, 2016. Swiss company Denipro AG is a specialist in rolling conveyor technology. As a system supplier, the medium-sized company from Weinfelden in the Canton of Thurgau stands for technological leadership, quality, and also proximity to its customers. In recent years, Denipro has acquired a sound reputation in the intralogistics and manufacturing sectors with technically accomplished and innovative products like deniway, easychain, denimove, or its latest development, denisort. Worldwide evidence of this status comes from customers like Nestlé, Mondelez, Volkswagen or DHL – to name just a few. In future, Denipro will further extend its position as a system supplier, banking on its expertise in developing solutions that open up ways for virtually all customers to optimize their processes and sharpen their competitive edge.

At Denipro, in-depth knowledge of the product plus a high level of expertise with regard to the process have always formed the basis for a product range that, in just a few years, has allowed this family-owned company to take up a position from where it can initiate further growth. The Swiss company, which in the 1980s began as a simple supplier to the postpress processing sector, has since undergone a remarkable transformation. Denipro has matured into a system supplier which, working in close consultation with the customer, can offer optimal, customized turnkey solutions for almost any application in the areas of manufacturing, intralogistics and packaging/filling. From planning through delivery to servicing and maintenance, the company is able to advise and support all customers throughout the entire life cycle of the project.

In so doing, every customer is set to benefit from the basic principle behind all product lines developed by Denipro, which are without exception modular in construction. If over the course of time customers' requirements should change, as a general rule it is easy to modify and extend their Denipro installations. The basic Denipro credo of "rolling, not sliding" also generates great advantages for each customer. Because as a result – as confirmed by a Technische Universität Chemnitz research project – there is a marked reduction in the undesirable high friction occurring at many locations along a conveyor line. In other words: due to their substantially lower frictional resistance, Denipro installations are generally far less prone to wear, and require almost no maintenance. For the customer, that pays for itself with comparatively low operating costs over the entire working life of a Denipro line.

Despite its somewhat medium-sized character, Denipro is represented throughout the world. This is possible thanks to the strong partners that the company has at its side: like Ferag AG, which is also active in the intralogistics sector, Denipro is part of the Walter Reist Holding AG international corporate group. The group is the owner – partly through WRH Marketing AG – of branches and commercial agencies in more than 20 countries. At the same time, it can look back on an almost 60-year tradition of sophisticated capital goods sector products.
